IMPAIRMENT. n. f. [from impair.] Diminution; injury.
His posterity, at this distance, and after so perpetual impairment, cannot but condemn the poverty of Adam's conception, that thought to obscure himself from his Creator in the shade of the garden. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. i.
IMPAIABLE. adj. [from impaiable, Fr. in and paiable.] Not to be perceived by touch.
If beaten into an impaiable powder, when poured out, it will emulate a liquor, by reason that the finallness of the parts do make them easy to be put into motion. Boyle.
TO IMPAIRADISE. v. a. [from impairadise, Italian.] To put in a place or state resembling paradise in felicity.
This impairadised neighbourhood made Zelmane's soul cleave unto her, both through the ivory case of her body, and the apparel which did over-cloud it. Sidney, b. ii.
All my souls be Impairadised in you, in whom alone
I understand, and grow, and see. Denne.
Thus these two,
Impairadised in one another's arms,
The happier Eden, shall enjoy their fill
Of bliss on bliss. Milton's Paradise Lost.
IMPARITY. n. f. [from imparitas, impar, Latin.]
1. Inequality; disproportion.
Some bodies are hard, some soft: the hardness is caused chiefly by the jejuneness of the spirits, and their imparity with the tangible parts. Bacon.
2. Oddness; indivisibility into equal parts.
What verity is there in that numerical conceit, in the lateral division of man, by even and odd; and so by parity or imparity of letters in mens names, to determine misfortunes on either side of their bodies? Brown's Vulgar Errors.
TO IMPARK. v. a. [in and park.] To inclose with a park;
to sever from a common.
TO IMPART. v. a. [from impartior, Latin.]
1. To grant; to give.
High state and honours to others impart,
But give me your heart. Dryden.
2. To communicate.
Gentle lady,
When first I did impart my love to you,
I freely told you, all the wealth I had Ran in my veins. Shakespeare. Merch. of Venice.
As in confession the revealing is for the ease of a man's heart, so secret men come to the knowledge of many things, while men rather discharge than impart their minds. Bacon.
Thou to me thy thoughts
Wast wont, I mine to thee was wont t' impart. Milt. P. L.
I find thee knowing of thyself;
Expressing well the spirit within thee free,
My image, not imparted to the brute. Milt. Par. Lost.
IMPARTIAL. adj. [from impartial, Fr. in and partial.] Equitable;
free from regard to party; indifferent; disinterested; equal in distribution of justice; just. It is used as well of actions as persons.
Success I hope, and fate I cannot fear:
Alive or dead, I shall deserve a name; Dryden's Æn.
I love is impartial, and to both the same. Dryden's Æn.
IMPARTIALITY. n. f. [from impartialité, French; from impartial.] Equitableness; justice.
A pious and well disposed will gives not only diligence, but also impartiality to the understanding in its search into religion, which is absolutely necessary to give success unto our inquiries into truth; it being scarce possible for that man to hit the mark, whose eye is still glancing upon something beside
it. Saunders's Sermons.
IMPARTIALLY. adv. [from impartial.] Equitably; with indifferent and unbiassed judgment; without regard to party or interest; justly; honestly.
Since the Scripture promises eternal happiness and pardon of sin, upon the sole condition of faith and sincere obedience, it is evident, that he only can plead a title to such a pardon, whose conscience impartially tells him that he has performed
the required condition. Saunders's Sermons.
IMPARTIBLE. adj. [from impartible, Fr. from impart.] Communicable; to be conferred or bestowed. This word is elegant, though used by few writers.
